Spread thickly on each layer of tomatoes, and when the dish is nearly full put tomatoes uppermost, a good bit of butter on each slice. Dust with pepper and a little sigur. Strew with dry bread crumbs and bake covered half an hour. Hemove the lid and bake brown.

Robin Hood-We think you are justified Robin Hood—We think you are justified in feeling aggreesed because your wife would not take you with her lust Sunday afternoon. Her plea that it was no place for a man to go is a weak one. A self-respecting wife will not frequent haunts which are not suitable for her to see or hear, or do, is equally so for him. Morality has no sex. The Ten Commandments nowhere permit a woman and forbid a man to lie, blaspheme, steal or commit any other crime. To be sure, custom looks at things differently, but custom is not law, Stand up for your rights, Robin.—New York Recorder.

Recorder. She—'I road your book, Mr. Scribbler, and liked it very much; but may I ask why ild you always have a shower in every chapter?"

Author—'I was afraid it might be dry."

He asked her for the glove she were,
For he was deeply smitten:
And later, when he sought her hand,
"Twas then he got the mitten.

A London firm has lately produced a decided novelty for the table which in these days, when all desire attractive and perfect appointments, will be greatly appreciated. This consists of a dessert service, the "Anil Lang Syne" service, in a beautiful bine spoil china, with landscape medallons in the center of each. This, of course, is not new, the novelty being that the designors are prepared to decorate with any desired landscape. So, should the purchaser be also the possessor of one of "Englands stately homes." he may have his service desorated with sketches taken from the various points of beauty on his own domains, choosing himself the points of interest he prefers, and thus bequeath to his heirs a charming heirloom.

Proprietor of the summer resort. "I don't see what we're to da, Last year we hadn't many guests, and there aren't any prospects that we'll have many this year."

His manager (firmly)—"There is only one thing to do. We must advertise that we've raised prices."—Uhicago Record.

New York Weekly: Mrs. Winks—"So your friend George is married. I hope he is happy."

Mr. Winks—"Happy is no name for it. His home is a little paradise on earth. His wife is an accomplished cook."

Stylish costumes of pale buff-colored linear duck with small dots of black scattered over its surface are made with full untrimmed skirts and Elton jackets, with fronts slightly tabled. The lacket turns back with revers that are dushed with two rows of the narrowest black velver ribbon, which also borders the edge of the large marine collar and the wrists of the muttan ing sleeves. The yellow straw sailor hat an suite is decorated with a band, and loops of wide black velver ribbon and a cluster of field dalsies of the "black-eyed Susan" variety.

The use of the mandolin in some of the high churches in London does not seem to have given any offense, and it has only just begun to attract attention on the outside. Yet the practice has been growing for sometime, says an English paper, and now that so many of the young ladies have taken to the instrument it is sure to extend.

"He seems to visit you quite frequently.

"He seems to visit you quite frequently, But do you think him steady?" "Steady? Well I should say he was. He calls every evening."—Chicago Tribune. Young husband—"You never suggest an economical idea."
Young wife—"Yes I do. I suggested that we should buy a pug to eat the scraps we throw away, and you husbed at me."—

"Mos. Brown never sits up to wait for her husband." "Not" "No. When she existed him to stay out late she retires early, sets the alarm at 5 clock and gets up refreshed and repronental. "Puck."

The number of English words which have no rhyme in the language is very large; 5,000 or 6,000 at least are without rhymes, and consequently can be employed at the end of the verse only by transposing the accent, coupling them with an imperfect consonance, or constructing an artificial thyme out of two words. Among other words to which there are no rhymes may be mentioned month, silver, liquid, spirit, chimney, warmth, gulf, syiph, music, breadth, width, depth, honor, Iron, echo.

Walter Besant is authority for the following information: "I see," says he, "that a so-catied new drink for hot weather has been lately recommended in the shape of weak tea drunk as soon as it is cool. I have nothing to say against the lukewarm beverage, but perfectly cold tea is a very well known tropical beverage. It is a very well known tropical beverage. It is a very well known tropical beverage. It is a very fine squiether as Dick Swiveller would say. You simply make the tea, pour it out into a lug, so as not to let the leaves sent in it, and leave it on the sideboard; when it is cool, freat it as Sairey Gamp treated the gin; take a sip of it when so discount of the port of the por
